Traction	200+ orgs, 7,000+ users, 94% rebooking, $0 Fortune 500 churn, $691K 2024 parent revenue
Angle	Trusted friend + futurist peer. Potential angel. Feedback as advisor before check decision.

WHAT'S WORKING — Lead with these

- The insight is genuine. The knowledge-to-action gap is well-documented and under-solved.
- Traction is above-average for Reg CF. 94% rebooking, zero Fortune 500 churn, named clients (DPR, Balfour Beatty, Advocate Health).
- The coach/Guide flywheel is clever — external coaches pay $3,500–4,000 to certify and then sell for you.
- Competitive framing is honest. Rex explicitly says the Rosetta Stone mapping can be copied. That's a founder telling the truth.
- Capital-project model (DPR, MWH, Balfour Beatty) proves sophisticated buyers trust this on high-stakes builds.

FIVE THINGS TO HELP HIM FIX

The story works. The structure will lose sophisticated investors before they finish the document.

#	Fix	Why It Matters
1	Complete the spin-out first	"Will be airtight before close" is a deal-stopper. IP must be assigned, MindShift obligations clear. ~$10K legal bill protects the raise.
2	Separate the revenue story	$52K GeniusSpark-specific vs. $3M pre-money = 58x multiple. Lead with 94% rebooking, zero Fortune 500 churn, $125K from insight dashboards instead.
3	Build a named Year 1 pipeline	"Convert 10% of 180 clients" is a strategy. He needs 15–20 named accounts, deal sizes, conversation stage. Turns a projection into a forecast.
4	Address licensing risk head-on	If Gallup, MBTI, or Enneagram decides GeniusSpark's AI prompts cross a line, that's existential. Needs counsel sign-off stated plainly in the offering.
5	Name the enterprise sales hire	Rex's network got them to 200 orgs. Scaling to 500–1,000 teams requires a different motion. Name the VP Enterprise Sales hire, profile, and timing.

KEY RISKS & ASSUMPTIONS

Services-to-SaaS unproven	94% rebooking in consulting does not equal subscription conversion. Different buyer motion: procurement, IT security, budget lines.
Stickiness assumed	Daily manager behavior change is the exact problem GeniusSpark solves for others. Usage data not disclosed.
Vendor competition	Gallup, MBTI, Predictive Index can build an activation layer. Product is too thin to defend against a determined platform move.
Licensing exposure	AI prompts derived from licensed frameworks. Whether this crosses a line has not been disclosed as legally cleared.

Founder-dependent	The coach network exists because of Rex's 25-year relationships. Succession risk is real.
Exit math optimistic	~$45M Year 4–5 exit implies ~15x ARR. Predictive Index named as likely acquirer — appetite assumed, not confirmed.

QUESTIONS TO ASK REX

1. Walk me through the MindShift-to-GeniusSpark spin-out. What does MindShift retain, and what does GeniusSpark owe it going forward?

Probing: Structural integrity. Hidden encumbrance?

2. Of the 18 portal clients you plan to convert in Year 1 — how many are in active conversations today, and what is the typical deal size?

Probing: Is $720K Year 1 a forecast or a hope?

3. Who closes enterprise deals at scale — is that you, or is that a hire this raise funds?

Probing: Operational realism. Is there a plan beyond Rex's network?

4. What is your relationship with Predictive Index — active partnership conversation, or a hoped-for exit?

Probing: Exit thesis credibility. Named for a reason or aspirational?

5. Do Gallup, MBTI, and Enneagram know you are using their frameworks in AI-generated daily prompts? Have they signed off?

Probing: Licensing risk. The landmine nobody else will ask about.
